BIGGER IRIS

SPURIA - This group of Iris is one of the finest of all Iris. They lend themselves beautifully to bouquets and corsages. Their stout upright foliage and flower spikes are a delight to all just as the peony season is closing. They bring bright yellow, blue and bronze to the peony field. Spuria roots are shipped damp and may be included right along with the peony shipment. Plant them about three inches deep. S and F after the name stand for standard and fall.

BIGGER HEMEROCALLIS

We have a large number of varieties of Hemerocallis growing in our field. Many of them are just on trial but a few are in large enough numbers to be divided and offered for sale in 1954. If you have never grown hemerocallis you have missed a lot of fun as well as a lot of flowers in your garden all summer long. The Hemerocallis season is not Spring, Summer or Fall. It is rather a warm weather season. In fact, you can by selection of the right varieties have a lot of bloom from the first of May to freeze up in the fall. Some varieties bloom early, some mid-season, and some late. Then, there are some rebloomers that bloom twice and others that just seem to bloom all season after they once start. A few Hemps and Spuria Iris will add materially to the blooming season of any peony collection. They add the yellows and blues that are so short in peonies.

Hardy Amaryllis (Lycoris Squamigera)

The very attractive foliage is produced in the spring and grows on until midsummer, then it ripens and dies down. Then when the rains of August come along, the bloom stalks appear. They grow very rapidly and produce three to twelve lilac pink, lily shaped blooms each. Ea. 75¢ per doz. $7.50

PEONY CULTURE

The peony is one of the hardiest of all plants. It will grow any place where you can grow vegetables, except it does better in a climate where it freezes in the winter.

After you choose a place where you want to grow your peonies, then dig the ground to a depth of about one foot and break up all the clods and rake it down till it is good and mellow. This should be done some time before you want to plant your plants. Remember to keep far enough away from large trees so that the roots will not starve your peonies. When you receive your peony roots from the grower open them soon and see to it that they are kept moist until you plant them. If they are beginning to shrivel when you open the package, then soak them for a day or two in a bucket of water. This should bring them back to a nice plump condition and they will be ready to set out.

When you set your peonies out be sure to have the eyes about two inches below the level of the ground around the plants. If they are planted too deep they will be about two more years getting to the blooming stage. Be sure to pack the ground down firmly with your hands around the roots when you plant a peony. When you have the dirt all back except the last inch you may pour in a bucket of water if you wish, then let the water all settle away, then finish filling the hole with loose dirt. If the season is average and you have plenty of natural moisture it is not really necessary to water them down when you plant them. Just do not let them dry out too much the first season. Good cultivation at all times is best.

Peonies may be planted any time after the first of September. That is their dormant season and like other plants they do not like to be moved during their growing season. The best size root to buy is the three to five eye or standard division as it is called. A great big root may do better the first spring after it is planted, but after the second season the standard division will give you the best bloom of any.

Plant your peony roots about three and one-half feet apart and do not crowd them with any other plants. Like most plants they like to be grown alone. If you want good blooms next season, leave the foliage or at least all the foliage you can on the plant all summer. This foliage gives the root the life it needs to make bloom next year.
